READING

What You Should Not Do in Public Areas

P1 When spending time in public places, it's important to be careful about your actions. One thing you shouldn't do is be too loud. Talking loudly or playing music without headphones can bother others who might be reading, working, or relaxing. You should keep your voice at a suitable level to show respect for those around you and to keep the area peaceful.

P2 Another thing you shouldn't do in public areas is leave trash behind. Things like food wrappers, bottles, and plastic bags not only make the area look dirty but also harm the environment. Always make sure to throw away your trash properly by using the bins. If no bins are nearby, hold onto your trash until you find a place to throw it away. Being responsible with your trash will help keep public spaces clean for everyone.

P3 It's also important not to get too close to other people in public areas. This means keeping a comfortable distance from others, especially in crowded places like buses, parks, or waiting lines. Standing too close to someone might make them feel uncomfortable. Remember to be aware of your surroundings and respect the others' space.

P4 Lastly, you shouldn't do things that disrupt others, like smoking in areas where it's not allowed. Smoking can be harmful to people with allergies or breathing problems. Making inappropriate comments or acting aggressively can create a bad environment and might lead to conflicts. Always try to be polite, treating others with the same respect that you would like to receive. By following these guidelines, you will help make public spaces more pleasant for everyone.

GRAMMAR

Modals

Using modal verbs like "must," "should," "can," and "might" helps to convey different levels of obligation, recommendation, permission, and possibility when giving guidelines and discussing manners in public places. Here's how you can use each one effectively:

A Must

"Must" is used to express a strong obligation or necessity. It's often employed for rules that are mandatory and must be followed.

Examples: You must throw your trash in designated bins.
Visitors must keep noise to a minimum in the library.
You must not talk loudly in the library.
You must not litter in the park.

B Should

"Should" is used to give advice or recommendations. It's less forceful than "must" and is used for guidelines that are important but not mandatory.

Examples: You should hold the door open for others.
Visitors should speak quietly in museums.
You should not use your phone in the movie theater.
You should not bring pets into the restaurant unless they are service animals.

C Can

"Can" is used to express permission or to describe what is possible. It's suitable for indicating what people are allowed to do or what they are capable of doing.

Examples: You can use the free Wi-Fi available in the café.
You can bring your own water bottle into the park.
You cannot smoke in non-smoking areas.
You cannot enter restricted zones without permission.

D Might

"Might" is used to express possibility or a slight suggestion. It's helpful for indicating that something is possible but not certain.

Examples: You might find it crowded during the weekends.
Visitors might bring a jacket, as it can get chilly inside the museum.
You might not talk loudly, as it can disturb others.
You might not bring food, as it is not allowed.
